Avnet can help you fully automate and manage your middleware software whether it's hosted in-house or in the clouds.

In enterprise organisations, IT systems are required to run thousands of IT applications and tasks to support day-to-day business operations. These heavy workloads have driven the search for ways to improve performance, efficiency and lower costs. Deployment automation of the full software development lifecycle is an essential element in achieving these savings.

Talos is a middleware configuration automation tool that integrates with a variety of cloud providers and orchestration engines and is intended to automate configuration changes and application deployments across both commercial and open source middleware platforms.

As the original authors of the IBM Rational Automation Framework, Avnet has over 10 years' experience in middleware automation and have applied that knowledge to our next generation asset: Talos.

Talos includes:

- Import middleware configuration data in minutes from a run-time environment
- Rapid creation of deployment packages in a visual environment containing only relevant configuration data
- Supports creation of deployment packages that account for environmental differences (ability to deploy to Development, QA, Production environments etc.)
- Integration with 3rd party cloud providers and orchestration engines
- Create, clone, compare and mirror template based middleware environments for rapid environment build and change management

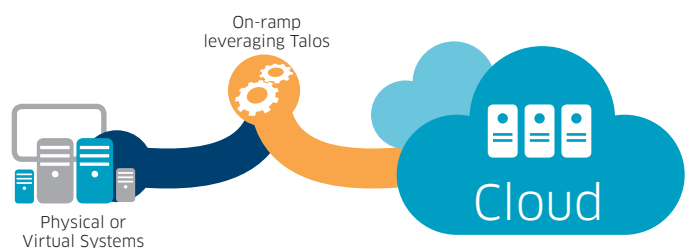

- Responsive web user interface
- Highly extensible API allowing for custom extensions
- Web services API and command line interfaces
- Integration with common source control systems to track releases and allow for roll back
- Deep support for IBM Middleware
- Professional services capable of implementing and extending Talos to support your workload requirements

Next steps:

Accelerate your move into the cloud by leveraging Talos! We can accelerate your migration into the cloud and leave you with a foundation for DevOps.
